

Hills residents keen on saving thoroughbreds

A group of Hills District residents have put their full support behind the Racing NSW Thoroughbred Rehabilitation Trust.

People in the area have shown a willingness to assist in the rehabilitation and re-homing of thoroughbred horses from the training program.

"Several locals from suburbs such as Dural, Kenthurst and Canoelands have donated the use of unused paddocks to allow for the short-term spelling of horses from the Canterbury Park-based program," said Scott Brodie, manager of the rehabilitation program.

"Being able to use these paddocks forms a really important part of our program. Without these paddocks it would be impossible to give horses a short break, which is imperative to their retraining and peace of mind."

Long-term Hills residents,

Frank and Kay Westbourne are keen participants: "We absolutely love having these horses around," said Frank. "It's a little bit of extra work - but this is a very worthy cause," he added.

The Corke family of Kenthurst have been involved in the program for nearly two years: "These are just the most beautiful animals. Anyone that has a bit of extra land should get involved - I recommend it," said Leesa Angles-Corke, a mother of four.

Racing NSW Thoroughbred Rehabilitation Trust is a non-profit undertaking that ensures retired racehorses have a more positive and secure future.

More short-term spelling paddocks are required and for further information contact Scott Brodie on 0448 088 844, email - scott.brodie@optusnet.com.au, or you can see the great work of the TRT on - www.Facebook.com/NSWTRT
